CMT Services, Inc. Launches Business Development Reserve Program

Hyattsville, Maryland (December 22, 2014) - CMT Services Inc., a certified minority-woman owned small business based in Prince Georges' County, announced that it has launched the Business Development Reserve Program (BDRP), a ground breaking and transformational program designed to assist Local Small and Minority Business Enterprises to become more competitive and effective in securing contracts with the Prince George's County Government and other federal, state and commercial entities.

CMT Services, Inc. was awarded a contract from the Supplier Development Diversity Division of the Office of Central Services Prince George's County Government in August 2014 to design and create a unique program to provide integrated instructional training courses and workshops to enhance and strengthen the capabilities and proficiencies of qualified small businesses in five (5) business industry areas. "Prince George's County Government is excited to be working with CMT to deliver this outstanding business development program that will allow businesses to grow and prosper in the County," said Roland L. Jones, Director, Office of Central Services Prince George's County Government.

"As the CEO of a small business, I am keenly aware of the needs and challenges that local and small businesses encounter daily," said Annette Johnson. "Our mission is very simple...provide proven tools and growth strategies to local small and minority businesses. Towards that goal, we have assembled a team of world class Subject Matter Experts and experienced business professionals who will provide performance based skills training for each C-Suite level participant, to ultimately enhance their abilities to leverage their company's primary service intangibles, and most importantly, enable them to better position their companies to compete in this evolving 21st century business environment."

Prior to starting CMT Services, Inc., Ms. Johnson was the Director of Pricing at Lockheed Martin Information Technology (LMIT) and the Director of Pricing for OAO Corporation, a privately held information technology and aerospace engineering company providing $350 million annually in services to the Department of Defense (DOD) and Civilian government agencies. With over twenty-five years of Government contracting experience, Ms. Johnson is recognized as an industry expert in cost/price proposal development.
